

Drive out damp this Winter

Do you want a warmer, drier, healthier home this Winter? Say goodbye forever to streaming windows that leave puddles on the floor, cold, damp beds and a chilly home that is expensive to heat and dehumidify and mould and mildew on your ceiling, walls, curtains and bathroom.

Anyone living in a villa or California bungalow will know how cold and damp these older homes can be. They can be equally uncomfortable in summertime when the weather is hot and humid. With energy costs likely to rise due to the spiralling cost of oil it is not always cost effective to install an expensive heating system.

Auckland inventor and electronics engineer, Curtis Dobbie, has come up with a solution. In his own words, "How often have you walked from the cosy warmth of your living room into another room into the freezing cold? I have designed the Healthaire System to transfer the benefits of solar heated air in the roofspace and excess heat from your woodburner or gas fire to these other rooms transforming these chilly areas to become warmer, drier and more comfortable."

Healthaire is a positive pressure active ventilation system that brings air from your roofspace through an exclusive air pollution filter removing all air-laden pollen, dust, diesel smoke, bacteria and even some viruses before they enter the home.

Cold, damp, dust air is forced out and replaced with fresh, warmer, drier filtered air providing a complete air change every hour. In fact moisture is drawn out from your walls, furnishings and bedding, dehumidifying the entire home.

This is good news for people with respiratory ailments like hay fever, asthma and allergies. Take Christine Windsor's 11 year old daughter, Rachel, an asthma sufferer.

"Her condition has improved greatly in that she has not had a major asthma attack since the system was installed seven years ago. I am so grateful."

Healthaire is fully automatic, just set it up and forget about it. Based on 2004 electricity prices, the cost of running your Healthaire system is less than eight cents a day, around $29 a year. What could be more important than your health and home.
